PRESIDENT'S BRIDE

HOLDS EYES OF ALL

Mrs. Wilson Makes First Public Appearance Here Since Her Marriage.

HEARS HUSBAND ADDRESS

PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS

Occupies Box at Memorial Continental Hall, With Others of Presidential Party.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, bride of the President, last night made her first appearance in public since her marriage, so far as social functions in Washington are concerned, when a representative gathering, which included the women of the families of the cabinet officers, members of residential society, the Latin American diplomatic corps and others assembled in Memorial Continental Hall to hear President Wilson address the Pan-American Scientific Congress.

It was the first occasion in connection with the congress in which President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson have taken part, owing to their absence from the city, and as the Marine Band played "The Star Spangled Banner" and the great audience rose to its feet upon the entrance of the presidential party, every eye in the throng was leveled upon the second left-hand box, where Mrs. Wilson took her place with the other women of the White House party, including Miss Margaret Wilson, the President's daughter; Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, the President's cousin; Mrs. George Howe, the President's sister, and the latter's daughter, Mrs. Anne Cottrill.

Last night's assembly of the congress, while it partook of a formal character because of the President's address, and the comment of Senator Don Suarez-Muniz, ambassador of Chile, the president of the congress, was in the nature of a social event, as invitations were by card, and the general public was not expected, the invitations being confined principally to members of the congress, the members of the cabinet and the United States and some other officials, the women of their families also being invited.

The assembly was, in fact, the principal social event of the day or evening in connection with the congress, the only other entertainment feature yesterday having been a special trip to Mount Vernon in honor of the delegates to the congress and the women of their families.

Reception at the White House.

Today there will be a reception in honor of the wives of the delegates to the congress, given by the Congressional Club, from 3 to 6 o'clock, and tonight will come what the delegates and their wives expect to be the principal social feature of the whole congress, the reception to be given at the White House by President and Mrs. Wilson, for which several thousand invitations have been sent out.

The President and Mrs. Wilson have arranged to receive the Latin American delegates and the women of their families half an hour earlier than other guests, and they will be accompanied by the Latin American diplomatic corps, the reception having been named by the White House a "Pan-American Reception."

At last night's assembly the Washington men who have been serving as aides to the foreign delegations acted as ushers. There was liberal assistance provided by United States soldiers, sailors and marines, soldiers being stationed at the entrances and on the platform, the latter standing at attention and holding American flags, which were unfurled and raised into the entrance of the President. Orderlies, too, were stationed at the entrance to Mrs. Wilson's box.

Upon the platform was a line of red clusters of Farley's ferns, the line being flanked at either end of the stage by standards with tremendous clusters of American flags. The decorations were made strikingly beautiful and thrown into relief against the white of the interior of the building by a curtain composed of feathery greenness. The boxes were similarly draped. The principal decoration was a great grouping of all of the flags of the Latin American republics, and the flags of the United States, the Pan-American flag, and individual Latin American republic flags were draped at many points about the interior of the auditorium.

The box above the President's wife was occupied by Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, and a party of friends, including Mrs. de Gama, wife of the Brazilian ambassador. On the stage were seated the Latin American ambassadors and ministers, as well as Mr. Lansing, John Barrett, the secretary of the congress, the White House aids who accompanied President Wilson, and the chairman of the official delegations to the congress.

Gowned in Black Velvet.

Mrs. Wilson wore a black velvet gown so severely simple that it was almost princess in style. The velvet was draped over one shoulder, showing a corsage of cloth of silver, laid across in simple folds. The other shoulder was draped with black tulle, edged on either side with a narrow band of black velvet. The sleeves were formed of long, flowing folds of tulle. At the point formed by the crossing of the velvet with the black tulle, a little above the waist line, was a large silver rose. Mrs. Wilson wore no jewels nor any ornaments in her costume, which gleamed with a dusky sheen almost as black as her gown. She carried a large black ostrich feather fan.

Mrs. Wilson occupied the corner of the box most closely concealed from the audience, preferring an inconspicuous place behind the curtains. The curtains of the box, and joined with others in the audience when they applauded to greet her distinguished husband.

Miss Wilson, the daughter of the President, wore a very charming gown of white satin cut in flowing Greek-like, draperies, trimmed with silver passementerie, which hung from the shoulders and crossed at the waist line, extending to a tunic drapery about the knees. She wore short lace sleeves, with streamers of white tulle fastened at the shoulders.

Miss Helen Woodrow Bones wore a pale pink satin gown, made with a bolero jacket, brought together at the corsage in a point, where the two sides were joined. It was edged all about with silver trimming, and there was a wide band of silver trimming about the knee-length tunic.

Mrs. Howe wore a modish gown of black satin, combined with black net.

Mrs. Cottrill wore a pale blue tulle gown, draped and trimmed down the front with silk buttons and about the corsage and sleeves with blue tulle. There was a cluster of pink roses on one shoulder.

Gown Worn by Mme. de Gama.

Mme. de Gama wore a handsome gown of gold tissue over cloth of gold. She carried a large satin fan, hand-painted, which was gold at one end and pale blue at the other, the sticks being of tortoise shell.

Mrs. Lansing wore a very becoming gown of American beauty satin, with a kimono draper and tunic of black thread lace.

Mrs. Daniels, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, wore a black velvet gown and a white ostrich feather box. Mrs. Swanson, wife of Senator Swanson of Virginia, was in pale blue tulle, trimmed with cream lace.

Mrs. Pezet, wife of the Peruvian minister, wore a very becoming gown of black satin and tulle.

Mme. Yanes, wife of the assistant director general of the Pan-American Union, wore a lavender satin gown, with a white fox boa.

Mrs. Henry D. Flood, wife of the chairman of the House foreign affairs committee, was in an elaborately jetted tunic over midnight blue satin.

NEW AND OLD UNIFORMS OF D. C. FIRE DEPARTMENT MEMBERS.

Prediction Made That Washington Will Have "Fest Dress" Department.

Some one remarked that it will be hard to distinguish between a policeman and a fireman when the fireman's uniform is placed in service, and that just about expresses the change that has been made in the style of the uniforms which will be given out to the officers and men of the fire department this month.

The first consignment of uniforms has arrived from the contractor, and members of several companies have received fittings at No. 3 truck company's quarters, which look more like a tailor shop than the headquarters of a hook and ladder brigade.

Long Coats; Military Collars.

Of a decidedly more military design, the new uniforms consist of long frock coats and standing military collars. The old style consists of a short double-breasted sack coat, with a turn-down collar.

The rank of chief of the department is signified by a silver spread eagle on each shoulder; that of deputy chief by a silver oak leaf and of a battalion chief by a gilt oak leaf. Captains' uniforms have two silver bars on the shoulder straps, lieutenants' one silver bar and sergeants' three regulation army chevrons. The insignia for engineers is the flywheel of an engine with the letter E in the center, and for drivers a motor steering wheel with the letter D in the center.

According to Chief Frank J. Wagner, Washington will have the best dressed fire department in the country when the new uniforms are dedicated to service. They will be given out at one time, probably during the latter part of the month. The cost of the uniforms, which is paid by members of the department, ranges from $20.80 for privates to $23 for the chief engineer.

PREPAREDNESS IS URGED

BY SENATOR WILLIAMS

Mississippi Believes Bullying of United States by Foreign Nations Will Follow War.

Supporting the President's foreign policy, Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi yesterday afternoon addressed the Senate in advocacy of national preparedness. The Mississippi senator is in direct conflict with his colleague, Senator Vandam, on this question, who is strongly opposed to preparedness. Senator Williams' speech came during the debate over the Fall resolution calling upon the President for information regarding Mexico.

Senator Williams commented at length upon questions arising from the European war. He said an embargo on exports of munitions would "hamstring" the United States more than any other first-class power.

Senator Borah wanted to know whether the Mississippi senator thought that after the war some European government would attack the United States out of pure spirit of conquest.

"I am not anticipating an attack in the first place," Senator Williams replied. "I am anticipating bullying first and I am anticipating the fact that the American people will not consent to be bullied."

Plenty to Quarrel About, He Says.

He declared there would be plenty to quarrel about, referring to repeated torpedoing of unarmed merchant ships by one nation and similar acts by the ally of that nation after questions involved apparently had been settled by diplomacy.

"They are in the field of diplomacy now, and the President of the United States has very wisely attempted to keep them within the field of diplomacy," he added.

"I am sorry for one that Congress had to do this," he said. "I think the management of our diplomatic affairs would have been more wisely handled by a man long visioned, and deep visioned, and tender visioned. He has all three of them. They are apt to be mismanaged when they are made a game of battleship and shuttlecock on the floor of these two houses, even when I am one who plays the game."

"The theory that Europe will be too exhausted to attack after the war is false," he said. "One European power already believes that we have made ourselves the allies of the other belligerents. Unless we have an army and navy that will make them doubt that they can control the Atlantic, they will be too exhausted to attack after the war is over. If we are wise and patient enough to stand the bullying, it will be all right, but the American people are not of that type. Already we have been bullied by both sides. The belligerents have violated every rule of international law with regard to our commerce."

INTERNAL REVENUE SAFE

AT ST. PAUL IS ROBBED

Between $600 and $5,000 in Cash and Possibly $1,000,000 in Stamps Stolen.

ST. PAUL, Minn., January 7.—From $600 to $5,000 in cash and internal revenue stamps which may total $1,000,000 in value were stolen from the office of the collector of internal revenue in the old post office building last night, when the vault door was blown open.

E. J. Lynch, revenue collector, who immediately after the robbery was discovered joined St. Paul and Minneapolis police departments in an investigation, said the robbers carefully had picked out the negotiable stamps, leaving unnegotiable ones in large amount. He said it was evident, that the robbery had been planned carefully and carried out by experts.

Senate Rejects Nomination.

On objection of Senator Hardwick, the Senate has rejected the nomination of Charles L. Collins as postmaster at Carversville, Ga. Collins was recommended by Representative Gordon Lee against the wishes of Senator Hardwick. When the nomination reached the Senate in executive session the Georgia senator declined to withdraw his opposition and Collins' confirmation was denied.

FOR UNIVERSITY BOARD

IN INTERIOR DEPARTMENT

Bill Drafted by Board of Trade Committee Introduced in Both Houses of Congress.

The bill introduced by Representative Abercrombie in the House of Representatives (H. R. No. 8042), "to establish a university board in the Department of the Interior," is the same bill which was introduced Wednesday in the Senate by Senator Gallinger (Senate Bill No. 2287). This is the bill drafted by the committee on universities of the Washington Board of Trade and approved in principle by the Board of Trade, which was described in The Star yesterday.

Senator Gallinger and Mr. Abercrombie were selected by the committee on universities to introduce the bill. The interest of Senator Gallinger in that that the bill relates to the welfare of the District, and especially in matters pertaining to higher education here, is well known. Mr. Abercrombie has had a distinguished career as an educator, having been state superintendent of education in Alabama, president of the University of Alabama, president of the Southern Educational Association and a member of the National Association of State Universities. Senator Gallinger being a leader of the republicans of the Senate and Mr. Abercrombie a prominent democrat, the bill is placed on a non-partisan basis.

On account of the fact that the bill relates to the general educational interests of the whole country as well as to those of the District, it was referred in the Senate to the committee on education and labor, and in the House to the committee on education.
